

New Green Products

Written by GDC

Thursday, 01 July 2010 00:00 - Last Updated Thursday, 01 July 2010 10:58

---

Typically trade shows are a mad house. Everyone is rushing from booth to booth to see what's new, what's on trend, what the next big thing is. This year's American Institute of Architects (AIA) convention last month in Miami wasn't really any different. While the number of attendees might have been smaller, the abundance of new products made up for it.

From sleek solar panels to decorative windows made from bamboo, this annual green conference displayed products for everyone. Click here to view some of the highlights.

Georgetown Development has worked on increasingly green homes throughout the Washington, DC metro area and would love to help you with your next green project. From one room renovations to custom home designs, Georgetown Development has been helping homeowners create their dream spaces for over ten years.

For more information Georgetown Development and to view some of our work, please visit us at www.georgetowndevcorp.com

Happy Building!